

SRHMRA Submission 297 — Prof Allan Spigelman

Consideration should be given to providing support for the recruitment of a cohort of clinicians with a major research component to their weekly work hours. This is partly predicated also upon increasing the field of suitably qualified Australian candidates. In the latter context pressure should be brought to bear on the Professional Colleges to incorporate meaningful research time into their training programs. They should also require research post-graduate training and qualifications before the granting of Fellowships.
